Make a Difference

Lead hands-on STEM and life science outreach across Western North Carolina. Under the supervision of the Senior Director of STEM Outreach, you will connect K-12 schools, community colleges, and industry partners through learning experiences and workforce-focused programming that support the North Carolina Community College System BioNetwork initiative.

What You'll Do

- Design and deliver hands-on STEM outreach programs for K-12 students, educators, and community colleges.
- Develop and facilitate training aligned with life science industry skills.
- Build partnerships with schools, colleges, industry, and community organizations.
- Plan and support regional outreach events, workshops, and conferences.
- Represent BioNetwork at meetings, presentations, and community events.
- Use technology and digital tools to enhance program delivery and communication.
- Monitor program effectiveness and support continuous improvement.
- Perform other duties as assigned.

Minimum Qualifications

- Bachelor's degree in biology, biotechnology, microbiology, or a related life science field.
- At least three (3) years of teaching, training, or curriculum development experience.

Preferred Qualifications

- Experience in K-12 education, community colleges, or workforce training programs.

AI & Emerging Technology Support

- Use artificial intelligence and emerging technologies responsibly to improve efficiency, support operations, and enhance service delivery.

Why Join Pamlico Community College?
